Subject: Hong Kong as a Hub for Talents

Dear Raymond,

This afternoon's meeting of the Committee on Economic Development and Economic Cooperation with the Mainland of the Commission on Strategic Development is very useful.

I would like to add just one point. Apart from attracting talents from outside Hong Kong, we should let our next generation, particularly the students in the local universities, to understand more about the world outside. To this effect, it will be very useful if the local universities can make more arrangements with the leading universities in the Mainland and other countries for exchange of students. This will help the local students to establish connections with people outside and will also let more students elsewhere to taste the "Hong Kong Experience" as suggested by Pro. Chan this afternoon.

Regards
Augustine Wong
